PRESIDENT

HONORARY PRESIDENT
Dr. Giuseppe Tirone

Each of us makes mistakes throughout life. Making mistakes is the most human thing that exists, as Seneca said, and it is even more so for a surgeon, who is called upon to make difficult choices every day. In our culture, we are used to demonising mistakes and believing that making mistakes is the path to failure. Since childhood, we have cultivated a negative view of mistakes ever since the teacher at school underlined our mistakes in red. Unsurprisingly, as adults, we are often led to limit our choices and actions for fear of making mistakes. As surgeons, what makes us afraid in our activity are not only the possible consequences for the patient but also the fearful medico-legal consequences and the loss of credibility with colleagues and the entire healthcare sector. Of course, mistakes can generate negative consequences, but allowing fear to prevent us from making correct choices leads to even more severe consequences. According to recent estimates by AgeNaS, the overall cost of defensive medicine would be around 10% of overall healthcare spending, equal to approximately 9-10 billion euros per year in Italy. Therefore, we understand the importance of moving away from traditional schemes of coding errors as a negative element, transforming them into an opportunity for learning and growth, developing skills and improving performance. It is the "error culture", a concept that underlines the importance of dealing with mistakes constructively rather than punitively. This year, the CTC 2023 (Trentino Surgery Congress), now in its ninth edition, addresses this theme. Given the significant presence of speakers from other countries, the event's format is an international congress, half in English, entitled "International Congress on Surgical Mistakes: A Critical Audit to Learn from Errors". Sixteen clinical cases will be presented by authoritative colleagues, in absolute respect of all privacy protections, with the aim of learning as many precious lessons to bring back to our practice. From the perspective of preventing errors, particularly in gallstone surgery, a very interesting and effective project has been developed in in the Philippine islands. Facing a long journey, colleagues/friends from Manila will come to illustrate their "Zero Bile Duct Injuries Campaign" and what results they have achieved with this program. Finally, a "gem" that we are delighted to offer. As Niels Bohr, father of modern physics, said, "The expert is a person who has made all possible errors in a very narrow field". Well, we have chosen three of the top national and international experts in narrow sectors of surgery (Hepatobiliary, Colorectal, Abdominal wall) and asked them to present their experience in a captivating lecture entitled "All the worst errors I have seen (and done) in my career." At the end of the congress a prize will be awarded to the best presentation. For all the participants: do not miss the opportunity to win the photography competition "that time....". To participate, register for the conference and send to our secretariat a photo taken in the operative room or ward, either of an error, or of something memorable, bizarre, incredible, dramatic, or simply particularly funny. The recommendation is to strictly respect the privacy legislation and, where necessary, the patient's consent.

We are looking forward to meeting you in Trento.

Alessandro Carrara, Giuseppe Tirone
